Tusculum College welcomes participants in the 2001 Theologian-in-Residence Program. These distinguished scholars, writers, and educators will address the intriguing and surprisingly complex subject of religion in Appalachia.

February 6, Paul Rader, Coordinator for Missions of the Coalition for Appalachian Ministry (CAM). Paul Rader's work with CAM, which is a cooperative venture of five Presbyterian and Reformed denominations, involves him in the lives of small rural congregations. CAM is based in Townsend, Tennessee. The topic of his presentation will be Ministry in Appalachia.

February 13, Deborah Vansau McCauley, independent scholar, writer, and editor. Dr. McCauley holds a master's degree in Hebrew Scriptures and a Ph.D. in American Religious History from Columbia University. She is currently co-editor of the "Images and Icons" section of the forthcoming Encyclopedia of Appalachia. She is also the author of the award-winning book, Appalachian Mountain Religion: A History. Her presentation topic at Tusculum College will be The Holiness Movement.

February 20, Fred Brown and Jeanne McDonald, journalists, authors, and editors. Fred Brown is a feature writer with the Knoxville News-Sentinel, a member of the Scripps-Howard Hall of Fame, and the recipient of several journalism awards. He is co-author with Harry Moore, of Discovering October Roads, to be published in the spring by UT Press, which is also to publish another of Brown's books in 2001. Jeanne McDonald has published short fiction, contributed to Knoxville's Metro Pulse, edited two anthologies and is a multiple winner of prestigious writing awards. The couple's new book, The Serpent Handlers: Three Families and Their Faith, is one of two literary collaborations between the two. It tells the true stories of three Appalachian serpent-handling families, one from Kentucky, another from West Virginia, and another from Tennessee. The topic of their presentation will be The Snake-Handling Tradition.

February 27, Loyal Jones, writer, speaker, and educator. Loyal Jones formerly directed the Berea College Appalachian Center, where he taught courses and ran workshops in Appalachian studies, started an annual festival of traditional music, and established the Appalachian Sound Archive of music, stories, and interviews. He has published extensively on Appalachian values, religion, humor and music and is a popular public speaker on those and other Appalachian themes. His latest book is Faith and Meaning in the Southern Uplands, published in 1999 by the University of Illinois Press. At Tusculum College he will talk about Old Time Religion.

YES!

I would like to attend the 2001 Theologian-in-Residence Program sponsored by Tusculum College and Holston Presbytery.
